Connecting Climate Chaos

Amazing stories from a bloke who left Canberra in January 2015 with his kayak and arrived in Paris October 2015

You think you know about rivers? Find out about the Mississippi, the most engineered river in the world, from the only person to have paddled up it in a flood.

Steve has great images and footage of the Mississippi that enthrall audiences, but other parts are equally as interesting

It is a story of adaptation, agility, intelligence, experience and pure persistence to achieve the goal of getting there. Humour, especially encounters with local police, break the relentless grind of reaching Paris.

People, equipment, weather, and bureaucracy, contribute to having audiences on the edge of their seats.

Paddling past the Statue of Liberty, and his first view of the Eiffel Tower as he paddled up the Seine were heartfelt moments that he shares.

And then, the putting of it all together; what was the trip about and what does it mean?

There is only one guarantee: you will not be bored.

"Steve is the ultimate Aussie storyteller. Great stories of perseverance and triumph, with plenty of charm and even more laughs. Inspirational to boot."
Dominic Jarvis - Griffith University EcoCentre
